Meteoritic Shower.

Astronomers expect a brighter than usual meteoritic shower during the coming week. Sunday night is the traditional time for these bodies to be most numerous. It is expected that parties composed of young ladies and young gentlemen will watch faithfully for their appearance. It is thought they will average from thirty to forty per hour. As it will last all night it would be worse than cruel to "call time," while the stars are falling.

Taken To Hospital.

Jessie Cook, the young St. Luke man, who received severe injuries to the frontal bone in a saw mill accident, several weeks ago, was taken to the University of Maryland, Baltimore hospital, for an operation on Saturday.

The Sunday School Excursion to Mount Vernon.

The committee of the Methodist Sunday School of this place, after much delay occasioned by the failure of the Railroad officials to give a definite date upon which to run their special train, are glad to give out the definite information they have arranged with the Company to run a special train of six or eight coaches from place this morning of Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1910. This is an excursion under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday School but they will be glad to have all who care to join them on this trip to beautiful Mt. Vernon, the home and place where Geo. Washington is buried.

The committee further announces that they have been successful in securing rates for this trip that are more than reasonable and that will be within the range of all who have never visited this historical spot along the Potomac River. Tickets will be sold by the committee at the rate of $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children. This fare includes the trip to Alexandria, from there by the chartered steamer Charles McAllister down the Potomac River to Mt. Vernon, entrance to the grounds at Mt. Vernon and the return trip to Woodstock. When one considers the rare opportunity they have and which they may not have again of taking this beautiful trip to the home of the Father of his Country, it should appeal to the hearts of every Methodist large and small, and not only to them but outsiders as well. When we consider that in taking this trip under ordinary circumstances, it would cost us not less than $5.00, whereas here is an opportunity to enjoy it in company with your friends and for the paltry sum of $2.00 for adults and $1.00 for children, under 12 years of age.

This is a trip that should appeal to the children as it will be an education in itself for them to see the many historical places along the way and the tomb of Washington, especially. Special arrangements have been made by the committee for their welfare.

Remember the starting of the excursion will be between six and seven, definite notice as to this being given later, on the morning of Wednesday, Aug. 24th 1910. Talk this up among your friends and let there be one grand scramble for seats on the train when the morning arrives.

For any further information call on or write C. L. Gibbs, W. M. Calvert, J. Russell Boyer, who compose the committee.

Fisher's Hill Reunion.

The address made by Major Holmes Conrad, of Winchester, at the annual Confederate veterans' reunion at Fisher's Hill on Saturday, was pronounced by all who heard it as one of the ablest ever made at that place since the reunions were inaugurated eighteen years ago, and at its conclusion Major Conrad was warmly congratulated by those about him.

The purpose of Major Conrad's address was to show why Virginia was justified in withdrawing from the Union, and recalled innumerable incidents in New England where secession had been urged years before the civil war.

He declared that millions of dollars had been paid by the United States Government to indemnify Northern States for expenses of the war and that the present pension and tariff systems were designed to give the North money, because money was the object and end of all their policies.

He showed that Virginia had done everything possible to avert war, but that Senator Zach Chandler, of Michigan, and others declared peace could not be preserved without blood shed. He said their motives were not patriotic, but they would lose money by separation of the states.

Notwithstanding that President Lincoln had promised the Virginia commission that he would take no step of being on war, he had already ordered ships and manitons of war for Fort Sumter.

He said that he wanted young people to know that Virginia did not act hastily or unwisely. She tried to avert war, but she had her purposes were defeated by Mr. Lincoln and public men of the North who loved money more than human life.

Resolutions by Major Robert W. Hunter, of Winchester, on the death of United States Senator John W. Daniel were unanimously adopted.

Eighteen years ago the Fisher's Hill reunion was inaugurated by a simple, little, unpretentious picnic, attended only by such as could conveniently ride or drive in private vehicles, and the promoters little thought that it would grow to the present large proportions and be of such importance to the grizzled and battle-scarred veterans of the Confederacy as it is today.

It is now one of the largest Confederate gatherings in the South, second only to the annual reunion of the Grand Camp of United Confederate Veterans.

Hundreds of people who live in distant parts of the country make their annual pilgrimage to the Shenandoah Valley about the time the Fisher's Hill reunion is held. For the past week many of the homes in the vicinity of Strasburg, Woodstock, Winchester, Middletown and other places in the Virginia Valley had been filling up with these former residents of the state from the West, North and East, while others have come from the farther southern sections. Although held under the auspices of Confederate veterans the reunion resembles more a great family gathering.

A Jacob Miller, of Orlando, Fla., a Confederate veteran, who was assisting in one of the stands, went on a merry-go-round to get some change. The machine started before he could get off, and some one or the crowd machine caused him to lose his hold on a rope, with the result that he was hurled to the ground with great force. Fortunately no bones were broken, but Mr. Miller was very badly bruised.

Camping Trip.

On Tuesday morning, the ninth of August, Mr. W. M. Smith and party will leave on forty-four for his annual camping trip.

He will take his outfit, which is the most complete in the South. The party will be gone about a month. They go from here to Winston, then to Roanoke, where they will spend the night of August the ninth, and from Roanoke to Front Royal for the horse show.

While gone they expect to take in Washington City, Mt. Vernon, Luray Cave, Elkton, Grottoes, Harrisonburg, Woodstock, Lexington, Buena Vista, Natural Bridge and all points of interest between Roanoke and Washington and some side trips.

The Norfolk and Western Railroad Co. have kindly assigned a car to the party for their special use on this trip as the company finds this the most convenient way to handle the party.

The party will consist of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Maner, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Smith and Misses Mary Smith, Addie Lore, Dora, Borkhead and Kathleen Smith, Jay L. Cannon D. P. Smith and Mrs. Smith and two servants, while other parties will join them later. —Concord (N. C.) Tribune.
